Hongkong, FEBRUARY 18th, 1871 A VALUABLE note by Dr. R. A. Jamieson, Shanghai, on the subject of sun stroke, is extracted elsewhere. The matter, naturally one of much interest in those parts, has been frequently discussed before, but the view now propounded has not, we believe, been previously given to the public. It is one which deserves much attention; as the necessity for protecting the eyes from the glare of the sun has not hitherto been sufficiently attended to -a neglect which has probably been the Superintendent secret of many trying maladies, that have been hastily attributed to other causes. It would perhaps scarcely be believed that Mesers. (Cycle.) As sanitary procuntions have been succesgively adopted in Hongkong, so the bealth of the colony has steadily improved. For the 20 past year the percentage of deaths to the number of foreign residents was 3.10 against 7.52 in 1859, and although on the numbers stated the death rate apparently increased over that of the two preceding years, this is ascribed to the facts that the tables are calculated upon the basis of the 1869 census, and that the registration of deaths not being suforced by law, is being rendered complete only gradually year by year. The tendency to disease in Hongkong if not the notual invasion of disease, i largely attributed to the unwholesome condition of drains which are not run out into deep water. Hence at low tide the foreshore in covered with sawage, and the wind blowing into the seaward openings forces foul air out of the various gratings throughout the town. Typhus fever was imported from Yokohama in On Wednesday ovening Mr. Brannan, agent to eight vessels which reached Hongkong between the 10th of February and the 11th of May. No fresh cases presented themselves among the remainder of the crews after the removal of the intected mon, and of these latter only one died.
